DIGITAL FINANCE

The digital impact on the financial sector is undeniable. New players with a mobile, tech and online approach are entering the market with innovative business models.

Traditional financial institutions are feeling the heat of disruption and prepare their existing structures for the digital age. While Incumbents have an established client base and often hold regulatory clearance, they must keep pace in this rapidly transforming environment. FinTech players, on the other hand, must learn to navigate this highly regulated market.

For some years now, Brussels-based law firm Simont Braun has had a dedicated Digital Finance Team which has been the first of its kind on the Belgian market. The team gathers renowned tech and financial law experts and combines financial law with ICT and data protection regulations. It is deeply integrated into the Belgian Financial Services & FinTech ecosystem and very well-connected with regulators, the academic world, and the service providers on the ground in both Belgium and abroad. Our Digital Finance Team is also a perfect match for foreign institutions looking for guidance on the Belgian market.

Most projects require a cross-practice legal analysis: financial regulation, IT contracting and licensing, client contractual relationships, outsourcing, data privacy & security, etc. Our multidisciplinary Digital Finance Team has in-depth knowledge of these matters and provides comprehensive, streamlined and tailored legal solutions to all our clients, be they seasoned experts in their field or start-ups on the edge of an innovative breakthrough.

Our practical expertise keeps adapting to the ever-changing FinTech market and includes impact analysis of regulations, license acquiring, drafting and negotiating agreements, as well as dispute resolution.
